The crowning event of the great carnival of sports at New Orleans occurs to-night when John L. Sullivan, for ten years the world's heavy-weight champion, meets James J. Corbett of San Francisco.

Sullivan's achievements are as much a part of American history during the past decade as the exploits of her great men in gentler walks of life. Corbett is not so well known generally, but in the sporting world he is regarded as ranking next to the champion in pugilistic prowess. His victories over Jack Burke, Dom McCaffrey, Jake Kilrain and his draw with Peter Jackson stamp him as the strongest man by far that has yet faced the champion.

To-night's battle is a fitting climax to the greatest series of prize-fights that ever have or probably ever will be recorded in prize-ring history. Pugilistic annals record no fight which has taken such a hold on the public interest as to-night's contest. All previous encounters, even back to the Heenan-sayers contest, fall into insignificance beside this great contest between the two greatest exponents of the many art. Sullivan has expressly declared it will be his last battle and this effort of the young Californian to wrest the title of champion from the king of fighters at the moment he is voluntarily stepping down from his throne has made three continents ring with his name and wonder at his daring. His ambitious effort will be watched with the keenest interest throughout the English-speaking world.

Just how this match came to be arranged may be of interest to many now who did not take particular interest in the event at the time it was being consummated. When Peter Maher, the clever Irish boxer, failed to realize the expectations of his Eastern admirers in his battle with Fitzsimmons all hope of a man coming forward to meet Sullivan vanished. Charley Mitchell and Frank Slavin in order to avert their theatrical ventures without a murmur to have all stake money and purse go to the winner. Corbett's money has been put up promptly at the appointed times, and he has never raised a quibble on the conditions.

Fast performances count for everything in deciding the outcome of a professional contest, and for that

There is one peculiarity about all discussions between Corbett's admirers and Sullivan's. The Sullivan man, after the manner of his champion, is self-assertive, rough. He says, "Will, not," "I think," which is the burden of the Corbett day of praise. Jim's admirers think their boy will win; they know reasons defeat. Indeed, he seems not to be able to clearly understand how any man might have the presumption to stand before him with an idea of conquest. Some who are here say this is over-confidence, and with an air of extreme wisdom they tip their hat brim forward upon their several noses and remark that over-confidence is dangerous. Then the long Californian is well-nigh chipped in his assurance of success to-night. Whether this is the outcome of overwhelming conceit, or whether it is a conviction based upon solid judgment of his own powers, the Corbett talent say, makes no difference. The fact is, they add, that their man expects to win, and that is a large fraction of the battle in his favor.

Outside the camps of the gladiators the tidings of these conditions are received, and various constructions are made, each tending to the prejudice of the hearer. Those who scarcely expect Corbett to overcome the creative of Sullivan's champion, but who, at the same time, hope that he may be able to do so—these say that when Sullivan finally sees before him a powerful and shifty adversary who has in his eyes the expression of absolute confidence, there is nothing that may be the result on Sullivan. If Sullivan, in addition begins early in the battle to feel the same confidence by Corbett will not phase Sullivan an atom, for it is he that has none of those nerves which in ordinary men are susceptible to stage fright. And as to his becoming terrified by an unexpected pugilist and science—well, the Sullivan men simply laugh outright. They say there is no way to break his nerve by cutting it in two with a knife.

And so the day opens and proceeds towards the hour when demonstrations shall take the place of speculation.

HOW ABOUT THIS?

SULLIVAN SAID TO WEIGH 211 POUNDS—HIS CONDITION.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 7.—Now that the combination of the three Jacks is broken the question among the sports is, "Will the champion win?" McAuliffe and Dixon in their respective classes have proven conclusively that they are worthy bearers of the titles they hold, and now the thing the lovers of pugilism want to see settled is whether John L. Sullivan, so long the champion of champions, will be able to retain his honors or if they shall pass to younger shoulders. It is but truth to say that a large majority of men assembled on the streets of this city, and there are thousands of them, all talking of the big event to-night, believe that the man from Boston will not only defeat the ambitious Californian, but beat him in a few rounds, any where from four to eight. They are so confident of this result that they are betting that the big fellow will win inside of ten rounds and laying even money on it. The Corbett people are taking such offers with a good deal of avidity, but in small amounts only. Corbett's friends seem to have only small amounts to bet either on rounds or on the grand result, and especially the latter. A few bets of a hundred or two have been laid this morning at the St. Charles Hotel with Sullivan the favorite on the result at 2 to 1, but a wager that runs into the thousands has yet to be recorded. The same bettors on Sullivan to win in ten rounds generally concede that he must do Corbett up within a short period of time, but they will not doubt that is, for a man who has led his style his life for years, but he is in his 35th year and he was very fat when he started in to train. He still has more flesh in the lower part of his stomach than is necessary and weighs to-day about 211 pounds. This is not official, as his handlers refuse to allow anybody excepting themselves to see him weighed, but a United Press reporter learned it from a source that is good enough to bet on. He is good enough on his feet when it comes to skipping the rope but this exercise invariably makes him perspire streams of moisture. He breathes heavily too after going through this form of exercise for any considerable length of time, but his skin is good and his eyes are bright and his confidence in himself remains as of old. The opinion that Sullivan will win shortly or not at all is based on the fact that his wind may not hold out. That is the one doubt of those who are betting on him. His handlers and confidants say that he is all right in that respect. Corbett is in as fine form as an athlete can possibly be trained into. It is needless to specify wherein his Sullivan people say that there is no section of Queensberry rules to govern the matter, and that a man can wear all the bolts and plasters he wants to. It will be remembered that Mitchell would not agree to the use of something of the same kind by Sullivan in France. Sullivan had to remove the cloth protested by Mitchell as London prize ring rules prohibit such artificial appliances.

Myer to influence the betting and that when they had succeeded in making the Illinois man the favorite, placed all the money in sight on the champion.

At midnight last night an excited little group of men stood about Wm. A. Brady and Steve Brodie in the St. Charles Hotel. A good deal of talk was had, and Brady finally offered to bet $500 to $1,000 that Corbett would win. Brodie jumped at the proffered bet and Brady put up his money despite the fact that the odds in the pool rooms at the time were 11 to 5 against Corbett. Frank the ring. Yet one has only to follow out the fight, round after round, to feel the immense distance that lies between amateurism and professionalism.

Never for an instant was the outcome doubtful or the honors in Skelly's favor. Despite his vaunted advantage in height and reach he could not land with any effect on the black boy, who parried every blow and answered with a two-handed return.

People who paid big money to see the fight were not disappointed. Dixon's exhibition of two-handed fighting was unparalleled and enough to satisfy them. His ring tactics were superb, the rapidity and force of his blows wonderful.

Dixon was the first to enter the ring last night. Ready cheers greeted his entrance and assured him of fair treatment. Skelly was given an ovation when he appeared a moment later. Tom O'Rourke, Jas. Dougherty, J. J. Kelly and Jack Havlin were behind Dixon. Jack McAuliffe, Jimmy Carroll and Joe Chynowski were in Skelly's corner.

The men weighed some hours previous to the fight. Skelly being 162½ pounds, Dixon at just 118. Skelly and Dixon shook hands cordially on entering the ring, and Referee Duffy gave them instructions, while Police Captain Barrett weighed the mitts. Back heeling and the foot and knee were barred. An exchange of courtesies followed. Chynowski attending to the lacing of Dixon's mittens, while Tommy O'Rourke did a like service for Skelly. More good natured preliminaries were never witnessed. Smiles and handshakes were general when the battle began.

THE FIGHT.

Round 1. Cautious sparring. Skelly looks an inch taller than his adversary. Both men lead for the head and come to a clinch. Skelly wanting to be the aggressor. Frisky sparring was indulged in and the Brooklyn boy backed away from a vicious left-hander, landed a heavy right-hander on his opponent's neck, and followed it up close. Dixon was cautious and put a straight left on his opponent's head without return. Dixon was forced to his corner, where he clinched to avoid punishment. As the gong sounded both men led without damage to either, and they were sent from a clinch to their feet.

Round 2. The men boxed cautiously for an opening. Skelly still the aggressor. Dixon attempted to land right and left, and missing received a punch in the stomach with a right. The colored boy landed a good left-hander swinging on his opponent's breast, but received a stinging right on the ear. A moment later Dixon was the aggressor, and he landed two heavy lefts on the face; his opponent clinched him and delivered a heavy punch on the colored boy's heart. The fight was fast and furious, and Dixon appeared to be getting the better of the exchange. As the gong went to their corners Skelly did not look so well.

Round 3. Skelly was the aggressor and, stepping in, received a heavy left which floored him. Dixon now forced matters, and proving too strong for his opponent, he wisely too clever, the latter slipped away. Both men landed heavy right-hands and Dixon was turned around from the force of his shoulder. Dixon landed a heavy right on the jaw which nearly sent his opponent down. Though by a clever duck and clinch the latter saved himself for the time being. Dixon was going all the aggressive work now and was showing very clever work. Both men landed rights and the gong sounded. Dixon now appears to be a sure winner.

Round 4. The men came up eager to mix matters, and Skelly showed a more anxious though no claim for first blood was heard from the Dixon people. In a hot exchange that took place in the center of the ring Skelly got the worst of it, receiving a heavy left on the forehead, though he delivered a good right on his opponent's body to even matters up. Dixon was very strong, and, in an attempt to land a right swing, he received a hot one from Skelly's right. Skelly stole in and landed on Dixon's jaw, and in a rally, which took place in Skelly's corner, he got a great deal of the worst of it. Dixon went to his corner strong and unhurt, though he was breathing heavily from his work.

Round 5. Skelly skipped nimbly to the center of the ring, hearing a confident air and seemingly untroubled. The men boxed for an opening and Dixon found it first, landing a heavy left on the head, and missing, both men clinched. Dixon received a heavy left on the head and gave as good as he got. A little later on Skelly was off his guard, and he received a heavy left-hand punch in the nose. Corbett nearly knocked his opponent down with a heavy right, and in a hot exchange, out of which Skelly came covered with blood, he seemed to be losing ground rapidly. This was positively the colored boy's round.

Round 6. The men stopped up briefly and came to a clinch. Dixon landed a heavy left-hand swing, though he got a terrible right on the ear. He was much stronger than his opponent, however, and the manner in which he offered battle showed his confidence in himself. He landed a heavy left-hand swing on his opponent's ribs and clinched to save himself. Dixon received a heavy right on the neck, though his opponent was growing weak. In a fearful exchange of blows Dixon landed two terrible punches on Skelly with both hands on head and body. The battle so far was all one way, and the white boy looked as if he could not last through another round.

Round 7. Dixon commenced this round by an attempt to land his left, his effort was futile, however, for Skelly, avoiding neatly, came to an awkward clinch, in which Dixon's generalship was much admired. Exchange of blows; both men's heads came together. Dixon followed up his opponent closely and the latter did not seem so anxious to fight. The colored boy landed a heavy right and left, and would have knocked his man but for a clinch. Skelly landed a heavy right and left hander, and in a heavy exchange he was beaten to the ground with terrible right and left hand swings. The young Brooklyn amateur fought a game battle, and that it all he can be said to have done. He showed fight while strength was with him and only gave up when nature gave out.

The men did not tarry long in the ring after the fight was over. Dixon was perfectly bruised and bleeding to the quarters he had left in such high spirits an hour before. When in the ring, however, Skelly was as brave as a lion and recovered his spirit. He had received such hard face and body punishment, and Dixon had punched him so hard in the nose that it was feared he might be internally hurt. Dr. Mandeville and Dr. Harrel were both called in to see him and examine him closely. They found him not seriously injured. Dr. Harrel thought his nose was broken, but Dr. Mandeville said it was only the cartilage that was bent. In a boxing bout at the Bay with Griffin last week Skelly's cleftory had been severely bruised and there was a scab on it. When the Stevenson is stakeholder. A quantity of small bets have been made at even money that Corbett will score first blood.

SULLIVAN'S FINAL PREPARATIONS.

JOHNSON AND McALIFFE TO SECOND HIM—ANOTHER STORY ABOUT HIS WEIGHT.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Sept. 7.—Rumor had it before noon, that Sullivan was astrait between 5 and 6 o'clock this morning, and that with Phil Casey he went for a tramp through the city streets before the easy-going Southern gentleman, Phil Casey, however, says this was not the case, and Phil Casey is a man to be believed. The champion slept thoroughly through the night before his battle, and at a comfortable hour this morning breakfasted in his room upon a steak which was in keeping with the man's size. During the morning the question as to who shall second Sullivan to-night was settled. Charley Johnson, who has more influence over Sullivan than any other man in pugilism, and who is also one of his backers, will be one of these seconds and Champion Light-weight, McAuliffe will be the other. Sullivan and Casey went around to the gymnastic club for the final exercise. The new punching bag, which replaces the one which Sullivan yesterday literally knocked the stuffing out of, was changed for another. The rope was skipped several hundred times, the leather ball was passed and then came the grueling and a little nephew, Johnnie Lannon, a lad of 10 years, of slight build, had gone along with his big uncle was sporting about in the pool the little fellow appeared in a blue suit, and Sullivan walked to the side of the marble tank, and leaning his great arm on the edge grunted and then plunged as the little one paddled his feet in the water. "Come on, kid," Sullivan said. But the lad sprang back.

"Come here," said the fighter, as he unfolded his huge arms and waded along toward the boy, who retreated.

"Come here, I tell you. I won't duck you," commanded the fighter, still grinning amiably, and the boy came to him, as much through dread as confidence. The great giant threw the boy at arms' length, and tenderly lowered him into the water. It was a picture of power against weakness contrasted. The lad went down in the water he caught his breath and pleaded to get out.

"You will get bigger every day," said the champion, as he turned away for another plunge. Afterwards he came to the rubbering-room, where stands a scale, and weighing in these in his saturated woolen knee-breeches, Sullivan was weighed. Phil Casey was conversing at the moment at the other end of the room.

"What's the weight, Casey?" inquired the fighter.

"John, what do you weigh now?" shouted Casey at the side of the scale.

"What do I weigh?" repeated Sullivan, half turning.

"Yes, what's the weight?" repeated Casey.

"Two hundred eleven and a half. Why, what do you want to know for?" responded the fighter.

"For the Associated Press," said Casey.

"Why didn't you tell me why you asked, and then I would have told you," returned Sullivan.

"Oh, no. I know you don't mean that," laughed Casey.

"Yes I do. They say I weigh 240 and I want them to think so, so I can get even on the betting," and the big fellow grinned a bit to indicate that he was in a jested humor.

The afternoon was spent quietly. At 5 o'clock he will eat chops and toast. This will be his last food before the fight.

DIXON'S VICTORY.

AS REPORTED IN THE POST-DISPATCH EXTRA LAST EVENING—FURTHER DETAILS.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 7.—The trained head and hands of a professional fighter of the first rank were too much for Amateur Jack Skelly last night. The Brooklyn boy was dead game and for a man out-classed as he was made a splendid effort. Looking back over the fight and following the men from their entrance into the ring to Skelly's unfortunate exit it looks like nothing less than cruelty to have let the Brooklyn amateur face his dusky opponent. Skelly was clever, probably the strongest, coolest and most scientific amateur that ever entered reason champions are nearly always favorites. Naturally Sullivan is a strong favorite to-night's battle, and those who back him have good grounds for their judgment. Despite the champion's enormous physical prowess he will meet to-night the greatest athlete, the most scientific boxer, the pluckiest opponent who has ever faced him in the ring.

The outcome of to-night's battle depends largely on the condition of the men. Corbett is physically as intelligent as any pugilist in the methods could make a human being. His why he ought, but that postiveness which makes the Boston boy's followers is wanting. Lack of confidence whipped Myer, Monday evening, over-confidence in an over-rated ability was the cause of Jack Skelly's drubbing last evening; will to-night's contest be a repetition of either event for Mr. James Corbett?

Corbett's admirers think he has quickness, skill and science to aid him in defending himself from the champion. They think Sullivan has trained too hard, that getting down from 245 to 210 pounds where most of it came off the region of the abdomen is bound to result in the loss of strength. Another deteriorating factor is that Sullivan will be seconded by weak men, Charley Johnson, his backer, and Phil Casey, his trainer, have never stood behind a man in a great battle and both of whom have given Sullivan the hardest tussles of his life.

The Corbett man's great argument is Jim's record, particularly his fight with Jackson. They say Sullivan was afraid of the nigger, but Corbett stood him off for seventy rounds and would have finished him only for his hands giving away. Corbett has had Kilrain and McAuliffe, both of whom have given Sullivan the hardest tussles of his life.

Corbett has many fine points; principal among them are his quickness, his rapidity in striking, his intangible tactics, his cool head and quick pair of hands as any man in the world. His blows have tremendous driving force, he is plucky, resourceful, confident, self-reliant and proud. With his shrewdness and knowledge of ring tactics he ought to make a good showing if he can keep a stiff upper lip under the champion's blows.

As to Sullivan's admirers, they have stopped thinking about their ideal of different qualities, they simply know he is strong enough and plenty of them to lick any man with more intensity than John L. Sullivan himself. He is thoroughly confident of his mastery and enters a fight with only one thought, how quick can I finish him? There is not another man in the world to-day who means himself like Sullivan. He is bound to fight from the start and keeps on fighting until his purpose is accomplished. He is resourceful, overpowering as the relentless sweep of a torrent, that sweeps on, regardless of barriers, overcoming all obstacles till its victory is attained.

There are Sullivan's ring methods, never deteriorated from. What line of action his opponent will oppose to them is a matter of conjecture. Corbett will say nothing that will prepare the champion, but the crowd in the arena to-night will not allow a repetition of the springing tactics that Charley Mitchell tried on the champion.

Sullivan is the king of Queensberry rule fighters. Rules, gloves, conditions and place are in his favor, and his chances for victory are very good.

There is not much room for argument on the outcome; the length of the battle offers more ground for speculation.

BOTH ARE CONFIDENT.

SULLIVAN AND CORBETT SURE OF SUCCESS—OPINIONS AT THE CRESCENT CITY.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 7.—The closing day of this festival of bruises has opened bright, clear and reasonably cool. In shady spots at 8:30 o'clock this morning mercury marked 86 and a fraction, and a brisk breeze carried away to the northwest the black volumes of smoke that rolled from the tall chimneys of sugar houses on the river front. A stiff breeze it is, too, so strong as to carry over the city almost horizontally the subtle streamers of smoke from the hotel as so situated that this refreshing breeze is cooled by the water and enters in cool eddies. At Corbett's quarters the movement of air sweeps clean through, but the curtains and stirring the mosquito net within. Pending their exercise, which will come later this forenoon, it may be said that both Sullivan and Corbett arose to the battle day in shape said to be satisfactory to their trainers and backers. The dogged and never-whipped Sullivan cannot imagine the possible contingency of his own perfection lies. Enough to say that he is all right from top to bottom. He is the best conditioned man, all in all, that John L. Sullivan ever tried to down, and if the big fellow does him he will be amply entitled to hold his title of champion.

THE PLASTERERS MUST GO.

PRESIDENT NOEL THINKS CORBETT'S POINT WELL TAKEN—GOSPEL AND BETTING.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 7.—The Olympic Club officials have not yet acted on Corbett's protest against Sullivan's proposed use of plasters on his stomach, but President Noel said to-day that it seemed to him as though the Californian's point was well taken. The Sullivan's seconds will be Charley Johnson, Jack McAuliffe, Ashton and Casey. At 10 o'clock the betting had gone to 1 to 1 on Sullivan. Some of the sports who are here are old Tom Allen, the old heavy-weight, who was a world beater, his day; Farrell of Dayton, O.; Bob Fitzsimmons, Jack Morrison of Omaha; Pat Duffy, Bat Masterson, Joe Goddard, Joe Chynowski, Parson Davies, Joe Lannon, Johnny Murphy, Pete Clarke, Tommy Warren, John Condon, Vere Davis, Patsy Fallon, Bob Farrell and others. A well known Northern pool-room operator stated yesterday that pool rooms of the city stood to lose $25,000 to $30,000 if Sullivan goes through. As the New York contingent and Eastern bettors generally won handsomely on McAuliffe not give the money holders a chance to win any more. It was currently stated that the McAuliffe people had put up the $15,000 on were issuing taunting challenges to the champion at frequent intervals along their route. The champion, angered at their persistent efforts wrote to the New York World calling on Mitchell to put up $2,500 to bind a match. He then issued a challenge to any white man in the world for $10,000 a side and a purse of $25,000. Corbett's name was not mentioned as frequently as Slavin or Mitchell's, but he surprised the whole sporting world by his ready announcement that he would only be too glad to meet the champion. His check for $1,000 was quickly in the World's office and manager Brady was ready with more. It was the day set for signing of articles and money was bet freely that no match could be made, but Corbett was on hand, preliminaries arranged, Corbett agreeing brigh eye, clear skin, a clear tongue and buoyant movements bespeak his healthy condition. Sullivan stripped looks like a re-juvenated Hercules. After his weeks of hard training he again looks like the Sullivan of old, only there is a little more of him. He is a trifle fleshy. A little too much so about the stomach but he is fully twenty pounds lighter than when he entered the ring at Kilbuck, Miss., and fought Kilrain for over two hours in the broiling hot sun. When he finished that terrible battle he cracked his heels and sprinted off to his quarters. He says himself that loss of weight means loss of strength to him, and he feels at his best when weighing 210 pounds. All this goes to show that though Sullivan is a trifle heavy, his weight will not interfere with his endurance. Though not as sleek or swift as Grayhound Corbett, he has as much endurance and besides a man's strength.

Phil Casey, Sullivan's Trainer.

PEST PRISONS.

Passengers on Plague Ships Pray for Deliverance.

Cholera Germs May Still Lurk on the Rugs and Normannia.

PLANS FOR TRANSFERRING THE PEOPLE FROM THE STEAMERS.

How the Dead Are Cremated on Swinburne Island—Dr. Hamilton Says the Cholera Can Be Kept Out of New York—Obstacles in Dr. Jenkins' Path of Duty—Suspicious Case in Bismarck N. D.—Plague Spots.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—To-day is brighter, frostier and every way more exciting than any day since the first cholera ship made this port and this evidence that the weather on this side is combating the invading scourge has sent New York's spirit up. Though it is reported that a few more cases of sickness have been discovered at Quarantine the main question, outside of actual combat with the grim enemy troubling the health authorities to-day seems to be the disposition to be made of the Normannia's many saloon passengers in whose favor the tide of popular sympathy now appears to be turning. They have petitioned the people of New York to take some action which will deliver them from their floating prison and there seems to be little doubt but that their prayers will be answered. The secretary of the Navy has indirectly offered the use of the naval reserve training ship New Hampshire. The government has indirectly tendered the use of the proving grounds at Sandy Hook and the Hamburg-American Steamship Co. is negotiating for the charter of one of the sound steamers. It is, therefore, possible that the health authorities will soon decide upon the fate of the Normannia's cabin passengers, who claim that it is not just to keep them prisoners on board a pest ship when it is proved that cholera seems to be confined to the stokers of the Normannia.

In this connection it may be added that many of the Normannia's crew have already been removed with the steerage passengers to Hoffman Island, but quite a number remain behind in order to work the ship and wait on the detained passengers. In all the Normannia carries a crew of six, and cholera seems to have obtained quite a grip upon them, yet these men have all been taken to Hoffman Island and there bathed and otherwise attended to, while their quarters on board ship were being fumigated. But to those familiar with a ship's forecastle and with the bilge or dirty water runs or drains of a large ship it is not surprising that the pestilential Hamburg cholera germs are still lurking in her bilge water, and possibly in other parts of her hull. Bilge water is about the foulest of all drainage, for it sometimes stems in the drainage inside a ship until it is black as ink, and smells strong enough to make the toughest sailor feel queer. This bilge water is difficult to entirely clean out, and it is a hard matter to disinfect the places where it lodges. This is perhaps the reason that cholera still lurks on board of the Normannia.

A BALL ON BOARD.
It should be repeated that there is no truth in the stories of panic among the detained passengers in spite of reports to the contrary. A reporter from a distance called Capt. Heibich of the Normannia late last night (at 1 a. m. in fact) and was informed that the passengers were all very well and enjoying themselves as much as possible under the circumstances. In fact there was a rousing "hop" on board the steamer, and the sound of merry music was wafted across the bay to the silent watchers who patrolled the waters in which the pest ships are anchored. The number of anxious friends of the detained passengers who have been hanging about the quarantine wharf is increasing day by day and the result is that the few small hotels and restaurants in the neighborhood are doing a roaring business and their proprietors bid fair to retire upon a competency if the siege continues much longer. Sandwiches alone, according to an angry Westerner, are a "dollar a bit" and hard to get at that price. The large army of newspaper men now skimming about Quarantine for cholera news have taken possession early during the scare of nearly all the available rooms to be rented in the interesting neighborhood. Consequently there is a constant going and coming between St. Louis and New York or the friends and relatives of the hundreds of passengers now exiled upon the cholera ships. Then there are the many steamship agents. Merchants who have goods on board the steamers, doctors, messengers, etc., mingling with the anxious friends of the imprisoned travelers.

WAITING FOR WIFE AND BABY.
Among these is Mr. Degetaus of Monterey, Mexico, who is a striking figure. For eight days he has scanned the harbor from Cliff Cottage bluff, kept long and anxious vigils on the quarantine wharf and paced nervously between the two places. On board the Rugs, which is still anchored off the hospital island is Mr. Degetaus' family, consisting of his wife and two children. They were making a tour of the continent when the cholera broke out. Mr. Degetaus is a wealthy cotton manufacturer of Monterey. When he heard that the scourge had broken out he called Mrs. Degetaus to take the first ship back and then he hurried on to New York to meet her, but he cannot see her, and what seems to him to be an interminable delay is wearing upon him. But this is only one case out of many. That is about the state of affairs to-day.

The sun is shining brightly, the air is crisp and delightful, the upper and lower bays are dotted with many busy little tugs, bearing doctors, steamship agents, newspaper men and others, here and there and everywhere all on business of some kind or other, some seeking cholera cases, others seeking news, getting still hurrying about in the hope of others even a distant glance at some loved one on board. Then there are the police boats and coast-guard pleasure crafts of all descriptions, the whole presenting a scene which does much to chase away gloomy thoughts and increase the chances of driving the enemy out, for in this healthy excitement few people find time to dwell for any length of time upon the darker portions of the picture, and it is best that it should be so, for next to the cholera itself, the dread of that disease, the feeling of terror which seizes upon some people and which is apt to communicate itself to the masses, is the thing most to be apprehended.

READY FOR THE SIEGE.
In New York there is still not the slightest feeling of alarm, though the good work of cleaning and disinfecting and preparing for the worst goes steadily on. New York may be said to be ready for the siege, prepared for the battle and determined to leave no stone unturned in the efforts now being made to turn back the black invader from our coast. Telegraphic or telephonic communications between all the hospitals, islands, quarantine stations, health commissioners, officers, police department and the Mayor's office are now complete and the Federal authorities have promised Dr. Jenkins, the health officer, all the assistance he may require to do battle against the enemy. So the city may now be said to be besieged by cholera and defending itself to the utmost with the appliances known in medical and scientific warfare and hopeful of repelling the invader before he sets foot upon our shores. In this effort New York is aware that she has the sympathy of the entire country, for it is the battle of the whole country, for New York is fighting and which she will fight to the last.

REPORTER ARRESTED.
Among the matters to be considered by Dr. Jenkins to-day are the disposition of the New Hampshire, which has been taken to Hoffman Island, and the advisability of transferring the cabin passengers of the Normannia to the pest ship. The reporter who was arrested for getting news from the pest ships, by which they have violated the quarantine rules, are also a matter of consideration to-day. One reporter smuggled himself on board a quarantine boat carrying stores to the Normannia, and it is said, was arrested. The reporter was arrested. Referring to the case Dr. Jenkins said to-day: "The matter is a serious one. I have no power in the case. Let the law take its course. Dr. Talmadge says the penalty may be $500 or confinement for 60 days. The Western Union Telegraph steam tug Union, went down the bay at 5 o'clock this morning to lay the cable which is to connect Hoffman and Swinburne islands with Dr. Jenkins' residence."

ARRIVAL OF STEAMERS.
The old time, brilliant, which arrived from Hamburg on Sunday, was carefully inspected and fumigated by Dr. Talmadge at 10:15 o'clock to-day, and she was allowed to go up. She had no passengers.
The steamer Wyoming, which arrived at Quarantine at 9:30 last night, was also boarded by Dr. Talmadge. She had 275 cabin and 263 steerage passengers on board. Among the steerage passengers, the doctor found during his inspection fifty Russians. The immigrants are liable to be detained some time.

The Western Union steamer left quarantine at 10 o'clock to-day to lay a cable to Swinburne Island, which will be connected directly with the doctor's office.
The City of New York arrived at Quarantine this morning. She will be detained here for five days, all probability.

No news had arrived from lower quarantine up to 11 o'clock this forenoon. After the morning visit of the doctor to the ships at upper quarantine the oil tank steamer Brilliant was allowed to go to her pier. The German steamer was then cleared and proceeded up the bay. The Portuguese steamer Oevenum was also cleared and is on the way to her pier. Secretary Seguire has left on the Manhattan for the lower quarantine with a large number of tents and bedding to provide extra accommodations on Hoffman and Swinburne islands. Mr. Seguire will endeavor on his trip to make an accurate list of all cases of cholera and deaths that have occurred thus far on the ships and islands. It is probable that the Anchor Line steamship Elysia will be cleared to-day. The Portuguese steamer Oevenum will also probably be cleared during the day. The tug State of New York has gone to the steamer City of New York, which arrived this morning, to take off her mails, which will be thoroughly fumigated before being sent up to the city.

CAN BE KEPT OUT OF THE CITY.

Ex-Surgeon-General Hamilton paid a visit to Dr. Jenkins this morning. In a talk with your representative, who had met him at Camp Perry during the yellow fever at Jacksonville, he said that he thought the cholera could be successfully kept from getting into New York. He thought it was most distressing the way the cabin passengers of the Normannia and Rugs were being kept on board the plague-stricken ships. They ought to be taken out at once and removed to a place of safety. If a vessel could not be got to put them on board, of they should be removed to Sandy Hook, where quarters would be provided very quickly for them. The government held miles of land on the hook and they would not be under the control of the state of New Jersey. In reply to a question he said that if they were transferred to Sandy Hook they could still be kept under the control of New York state as the Federal Government could temporarily loan the land to the state. He said that the period of incubation of cholera was only seven days and that ten days was what was looked on as safely after exposure. On being asked if in that case a three days' quarantine at this end should not be sufficient at the New York end, and to assure the safety of no new developments provided a steamer had been seven days at sea without any case, he said that according to laws of infection it would be, but it was not necessary to make assurances doubly sure in a case of cholera epidemic.

Gen. Hamilton is on board the Manhattan and will make a trip down to the island with the tents, which will be erected for the accommodation of the immigrants from the steamers Normannia and Rugs.
Gen. Hamilton is on a special mission representing the federal authorities.

CAUTIONLESS CHICAGO.

A TRAIN LOAD OF IMMIGRANTS PERMITTED TO PASS WITHOUT INSPECTION.

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—Through what appears to be the carelessness of some one or all of the local health authorities, a train load of immigrants from European ports was brought to this city by the Wabash Railroad between 11 o'clock and midnight last night, and allowed to go their way unmolested without fumigation or inspection of any kind. The police, as well as the health authorities, expected confidently that inspectors from the Chicago Health Department would be on hand ready to make the proper investigation before the immigrants were landed, and were not displeased when they discovered that the immigrants were allowed to land on Monday morning without inspection. It would be utterly impossible for the authorities to locate the immigrants who were brought to Chicago, and those bound further west had resumed their journey before the officials of the Health Department were awakened this morning.

Most of the crowd was direct from Castle Garden, having landed there last Saturday. It was understood that they were not from infected ports, and that every lot of immigrants or papers of any kind giving them a clear bill of health. For all the train-depot authorities, however, the immigrants might have hailed from Hamburg. A small portion of the crowd came from Montreal, but it could not be ascertained how long they lived in Montreal before starting on their journey to Chicago, and the number were booked for Chicago and were allowed to leave the station and seek shelter as best they could.

RUINED BY DISINFECTION.
Boston, Sept. 7.—The baggage of the Scythia's steerage passengers, which had undergone disinfection by superheated steam, was overhauled yesterday, and it was found that in some cases the process had had disastrous results. The steam ruined everything in the shape of leather. Shoes were shrunken and twisted out of shape and rendered as hard as iron. In some cases the baggage was damaged, and many of the women sat down and cried when their trunks were opened. One woman and her two children could not get their shoes on and had to leave the ship without them. Another woman whose disinfected trousers did not reach to her waist took them down with her. The ship's top deck was then left them with shivers.

APPROXIMATELY NO DANGER.
WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 7.—Acting Secretary Spaulding said to-day that the measures instituted to keep the cholera out of this country have proved eminently successful so far, and that he saw no reasons to apprehend that the dread contagion will obtain a foothold in this country.

The Secretary of State received a telegram this morning from the United States Consul at Bremen saying that the health reports show no cases of cholera in the North Sea. He also received the following telegram from the United States Consul at Quebec: "Emigrants from steamship Circassian started for points in Western States via C. P. R. R., entering at Seattle Ste. Marie and Detroit, quarantined for twenty hours."

IT WAS NOT CHOLERA.
BROOKLYN, N. Y., Sept. 7.—The Health Officers of this city received another fright this morning by a report that a case of cholera has been discovered in a crowded dwelling district. Like the suspicious death of the woman in the eastern district, it proved to be only an acute attack of cholera morbus. Mrs. Mary Asher, 40 years old, a resident of an humble dwelling in the rear of the house, 136 York street, was taken violently ill last evening with purging and vomiting. Her husband notified a druggist, who looked at the patient's symptoms and pronounced it was not cholera. An ambulance was summoned when the true nature of the attack was discovered.

QUARANTINE AT LEWES.
LEWES, Del., Sept. 7.—The following steamers are quarantined at the breakwater: German steamer Gettemunde, arrived Sept. 5; German steamer Paula, arrived Sept. 5, and British steamer Patonia, arrived Sept. 4, all from Hamburg; British Queen arrived on the 6th from London; British steamer Kate arrived to-day from Panama; British steamer Kate Fawcett, also arrived to-day from Panama; American steamer Illinois, arrived yesterday from Antwerp, released and sailed the same day. Steamers Lord Gough, Delmar, Atlantic and Great, steamer Southwold from Barry, England, arrived to-day. So far as learned from quarantine authorities there is no sickness of any kind and every precaution and effort is being made to inspect and, if necessary, disinfect every vessel arriving.

PRECAUTIONS AT HALIFAX.

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia, Sept. 7.—Last night the Halifax Board of Health considered for the first time the matter of taking precautions against the introduction of cholera. The Board resolved that no ships from foreign ports shall land persons or freight until after receiving permission from the port physician. This resolution merely asks the port physician to do his duty under existing laws.

IN THE FAR WEST.

A GENUINE CASE OF CHOLERA REPORTED IN BISMARCK.

BISMARCK, N. D., Sept. 7.—It has leaked out that what the attending physician, Dr. Porter, regards as a genuine case of Asiatic cholera has occurred in Bismarck and that the patient is not out of danger. The sufferer is a prominent citizen and it is understood that his symptoms are declared by Dr. Porter, who is one of the most eminent physicians of the State and generally in custody of the law. The matter has been kept from the public to prevent alarm and the facts are secured only by an accidental revelation. There is some fear that the disease has been brought here by immigrants arriving from over the border and in some way the attack has been exposed without knowing it.

CHOLERA IN EUROPE.

NO FEARS OF AN EPIDEMIC IN BERLIN—PEST-STRICKEN PLACES.

BERLIN, Sept. 7.—Dr. Guttmann, at a meeting of the Sanitary Commission to-day, announced that there was not the slightest ground for fear of an epidemic in Berlin. Cholera was steadily diminishing and only a few sporadic cases were taken to the hospital during last night and the forenoon to-day.

The sanitary measures adopted by the German authorities are stopping the importation of Russian rags, many thousands bales of which are waiting on the frontier, owing to the authorities declaring their inability to execute the required regulations in regard to fumigation and disinfection.

The Hamburgers are making grave charges against the Hamburg-American Steamship Co. in regard to the vessels of that line reported from New York to have arrived at that port with cases of cholera on board. The company refuses to speak about the matter.

The Hamburgers' Kreuzzeitung maintains that 4,000 persons have died from cholera in Hamburg within the past fortnight.

CASES AND DEATHS IN PARIS.

PARIS, Sept. 7.—The Prefect of Police has begun to issue daily bulletins giving the number of new cases and deaths. The first bulletin was issued this morning and gives the figures for Monday and Tuesday. According to these figures eighty-nine new cases of cholera were reported in the city and nine new cases and sixteen deaths in the suburbs. Yesterday forty-one new cases and twenty-six deaths were reported in the city and nine new cases and sixteen deaths in the suburbs.

The attention of the government has been called to the fact that a large number of Russian Jews landing at Marseilles are to be sent to the interior, where they will be required to undergo washing and disinfection.

CHOLERA IN BELGIUM.
LONDON, Sept. 7.—In the weekly mortality returns the Registrar-General, after giving the death rate of London as sixteen per 1,000, states that two deaths were due to cholera, or choleraic diarrhoea.

The White Star Line Co. will allow a number of steerage passengers, who have been booked forward, to travel by the Adriatic, sailing Saturday from Liverpool. If there is a case of cholera in the Adriatic, which sails to-morrow, the samarra, which is to sail on the 22nd, will carry steerage passengers. The wife of a farmer living at Whaley Bridge, a village near Derby, is reported to have died last night from Asiatic cholera.

PEST-STRICKEN HAMBURG.
HAMBURG, Sept. 7.—The statement of the cholera epidemic in this city is quite significant. As a measure of precaution against further infection, the sale of water taken from the Elbe has been stopped. Eight engines are now employed by the city authorities to boil water for drinking purposes. Forty stevedores engaged in the North Sea fish trade are idle as a consequence of the epidemic. The violence of the disease is decidedly abating in the suburbs.

THROUGHOUT RUSSIA.
St. PETERSBURG, Sept. 7.—The cholera returns for Sept. 4 for the whole empire place the number of new cases at 4,770 and the deaths at 2,065, showing an increase of 400 new cases as compared with the previous day. The number of deaths was exactly the same number that occurred Saturday. The number of new cases and deaths were reported. This is an increase of five new cases and a decrease of five deaths as compared with Monday's figures.

PORTUGUESE PORTS.
LISBON, Sept. 7.—The maritime and commercial communities protest against what they term the needless severity of the government decree forbidding vessels from infected ports to either embark or disembark passengers or merchandise at Portuguese ports.

Be Sure and Use Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for your children while Teething; See a bottle.

INTERNAL REVENUE ARRESTS.

A Large Number of Liquor Sellers Brought Into Court.

The attention of the Internal Revenue Department has been largely devoted during the month of August to the detection of cases of selling liquor without the payment of special taxes, and as a consequence a very large number of arrests have been made. In a great majority of instances the failure to pay is due to carelessness, in others to temporary embarrassment and in still others to ignorance. There are a large number of vendors who are sold under the head of liquor. The agents who place them state that no government tax is imposed, and the vendors are surprised at being arrested. In such cases the suits are generally dismissed upon payment of the special tax. There are, however, not a few cases of illicit distilling brought before the United States Commissioner, but the revenue officers believe that they have succeeded in routing out nearly if not quite all of the moonshiners.

The Dread Cholera.

"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," and the only way to escape cholera is to avoid eating and drinking articles in which germs flourish and live. Every household should be sure that his drinking water is absolutely pure and germless. Hygeia Spring water is clear as a crystal, sparkling as a diamond and absolute death to cholera germs.

A COLD WAVE COMING.

The Thermometer Will Fall Sharply on Friday.

Under the influence of southerly winds the temperature will rise slowly. To-night is likely to be decidedly warmer than last night, while to-morrow will in all probability be somewhat warmer than to-day. But this will not last long, as a marked fall in the temperature is looked for on Thursday night or Friday morning. Rain for Northern Missouri to-night, but it is considered improbable that it will extend so far south as St. Louis, although showers may come.

Death Claimed the Quaker Poet This

THE PATIENT SUFFERER CONSCIOUS TO THE LAST MOMENT.

To Be Buried Saturday Afternoon
Amesbury, Mass., According to Quaker Rites—His Last Verses Addressed

HAMPDEN FALLS, N. H., Sept. 7.—John Greenleaf Whittier died at 4:30 o'clock this morning. He had been lying critically ill at the home of Miss Grove at this place, and his condition was such that grave apprehensions were entertained of his recovery. Mr. Whittier spent the last seven weeks in this town and has very often remarked on his improved health and the enjoyment he had received from all the pleasant surroundings.

which he found himself. He had been freed from all labors and received but few calls that he might derive all the benefit possible during his stay.

His last extensive literary effort was the poem for the Atlantic to Dr. Holmes, and the last verse he wrote was for the Journal, published on the birthday of Dr. Holmes last week. He complained on Wednesday last of internal disturbance. Medical assistance was immediately called, but no apprehensions were felt. Last Saturday morning, about 6 o'clock, an alarming chance manifest in his condition, and there was a change for the better till the end came. He passed away peacefully. His nearest relatives and Dr. Douglass were at his bedside when death came and he seemed conscious of his surroundings at the last moment. The funeral will take place at Amesbury, Mass., at 2:30 p. m. Saturday next. According to Quaker custom the services will be quite simple, and no sermon will be preached. He was 84 years of age.

LIFE OF JOHN G. WHITTIER.
When Longfellow died John G. Whittier

And his authority was always so tempered by playful humor and an air of friendly confidence that his readers that his poetry was never chilling.

He was born of Quaker ancestry in Haverhill, Mass., Dec. 17, 1827. He worked on a farm until the winter months, when he attended school and learned shoemaking. When he was 20 years old, he paid for six months schooling with the money he had earned at the cabinet-maker's bench, and then, according to the simple notions of those days, he taught himself sufficiently learned to teach. When 19 years old he had begun to write poetry, the poetic instinct in him having been awakened by a copy of Burns's poems which fell into his hands when he was 14 years old. His first poems were contributed to the Free Press in Newburyport, Conn., and were published in 1846. He was an Abolitionist. This association had much do with shaping the life of the poet. For the next 15 years, he was a traveling salesman and managed several little New England papers, at the same time carrying on a family farm which had fallen into his hands at the death of his father. When he was 25 years old, he became Secretary of the American Anti-Slavery Society, and then moved to Philadelphia where he again carried on a Pennsylvania Freeman. In this he wrote against slavery with such courage that the office was sacked and burned. After that he moved to Amesbury, a little town near his birth-place, and there he lived for most of the rest of his life. He had a small pension of an income which made him independent. From 1849 to 1859 he wrote editorials paper in which "Uncle Tom's Cabin" first published. The civil war grieved him in his "Word for the Hour," written in 1861, he showed that he would have liked to avert it. While it lasted he wrote very little about it, and nothing polemical. When it was over he was conciliatory.

Whittier's first book was "Legends of New England," in prose and verse, which was published in 1861. His best known poem since have been "Floyd Irons," which has a flavor of Walter Scott's ballads, "Songs of My Home," "Carmichael," "Carmichael," written in 1876, "Naud Mulier," "Voices of Freedom" and "In War Time Whittier's sister, Elizabeth Hussey, died in 1863, at the age of 50. She was a writer of graceful poems of liberty, and the poet published after her war all her writings in a collection which he called "Hazel Blossoms."

THE NEWS IN BOSTON.

CRAZED BY DRINK.

William Lewis Attempts to Slaughter a Whole Family.

AFTER SHOOTING HIS WIFE AND SISTER-IN-LAW HE KILLS HIMSELF.

He Went to the House Bent on a Massacre—He First Tried to Kill His Baby and Then Shot His Wife—The Widow Tells Her Story of the Dreadful Tragedy.

William Lewis, a painter, 25 years old, after shooting his wife, Mrs. Nellie Lewis, attempting to murder his 5-month-old baby and shooting his sister-in-law, Miss Mary McGuigan at her home, No. 928 Tyler street, yesterday afternoon, put the pistol to his own head and blew out his brains.

The story is a sad dramatic tragedy of a young married couple caused by drink. On Jan. 7, 1891, William Lewis was married to Miss Nellie McGuigan and the couple lived happily together for a time at No. 272 Walnut street. During the first few months of their married life he was sober and worked steadily at his trade. His fondness for drink and evil associations soon wrought a change in this, however, and before their first child was born, about five months ago, he was drinking to excess, squandering both his own and her money, and rapidly approaching the inevitable end of a life of dissipation. His wife and her two sisters, Miss Maggie and Miss Mary McGuigan, remonstrated with him and endeavored to lure him from his evil ways, but all to no purpose. A separation by mutual agreement was agreed upon, and Mrs. Lewis went to live with her sisters at the house where the tragedy of yesterday was enacted. After the separation Lewis went from bad to worse, his troubles preyed upon his mind, and in one of his states of frenzy he notified his wife that unless she returned to him he would take his own life. About two weeks ago he made an unsuccessful attempt to poison himself, and his wife hearing of it concluded that she had better get a divorce and separate herself from him for all time. Proceedings were accordingly instituted, and Saturday last he was served with the papers.

This seems to have been the last straw and all resolutions of reform were thrown to the winds. Monday he was seen loitering in the vicinity of 928 Tyler street, and Mrs. Lewis being informed of it ordered the blinds closed, so as to give the house an air of desertion. Yesterday afternoon, Lewis, having written two letters and dressed himself neatly, went to a barber shop, where he was shaved and had his mustache waxed and curled.

He then proceeded to his home where his wife and baby lived, and after looking around the neighborhood until he saw his sister-in-law, Miss Maggie McGuigan, leave by a rear gate, ostensibly to mail a letter, he slipped in, and before any of the inmates were aware of his presence he stood in the front room with a 12-caliber Smith & Wesson revolver in his hand.

His wife was sitting in one corner of the room and his sister-in-law, Miss Mary McGuigan, in another with the baby. Without a word he stepped up to the baby, and placing the revolver at his head proceeded to pull the trigger. A flash of light and Miss McGuigan grabbed it and diverting its direction, received the bullet in the palm of her hand.

Lewis then turned upon his wife and fired at her, the ball striking her in the right groin. She had risen and was fleeing from the room. He fired a second shot at her, which luckily missed its aim. Mrs. Lewis staggered into the yard, where she fell. Miss McGuigan had by this time made her escape with the baby, and Lewis, finding himself alone, went to the bedside and, placing the revolver to his right temple, pulled the trigger.

Ex-Police Officer John Clement and Officers Maher and DeWitt were the first to arrive in the front room after the shooting. The two officers entered the house with drawn revolvers, when they found Lewis lying on the floor with the brains oozing out of the wound in his head. He died in a few minutes. Mrs. Lewis was taken into the house and placed on a bed, when Dr. W. V. Graess, who had been sent for, attended to her. Her wound is not necessarily fatal. Miss McGuigan's wound, while painful, is not serious. Lewis' body was taken to the Morgue by order of the coroner.

LETTER LEFT BY THE MURDERER. The two letters left by Lewis were similar in tenor and contents. They were both dated Sept. 6, from 281 Morgan street, the residence of his parents, and were written on the letter-heads of the Hotel Barnum. One of them was as follows:

God forgive this man. I am so discouraged I don't want to live. My friends are gone, so I have nothing to live for. My wife and sister-in-law are responsible for this awful crime. They took my wife and baby from me, and I got my wife to sue for divorce. "Oh, yes, they are good Catholics," God will pay them. "I will go to their home, 928 Tyler street, and I will kill them." I am a Catholic, so the baby will not be raised a Catholic. So, good-bye, my wife and sister-in-law. I cannot live without my wife. Maggie McGuigan said when we were married that if we were not together a year, we would be divorced. I do hope I can see her when I go to her house. You may say "He is out of his mind." I am as rational as I ever was. Give me credit for being so. I will stop by waiting all my life, unless they are deserving of it. I guess I am the only black sheep among them, so by-bye.

Yours for my last, WILLIAM LEWIS.

THE WIDOW'S STORY. A reporter of the Post-Dispatch called at No. 928 Tyler street this morning and found Dr. W. V. Graess, who is attending Mrs. Lewis and her sister, just about to pay them a visit. On condition that the Lewis would keep calm and not unduly excite herself he gave his permission to her to make a statement to the reporter.

The wounded wife is a pretty little woman of medium height, with large black eyes, dark complexion and dark hair. She told her story in a low, gentle but firm voice, which had no tone of bitterness or malice towards the man who had wanted to murder both her and their little boy.

"For three months after our marriage," she said, "I was a very happy woman. I was a band, but then he began to drink very heavily and was several times on the verge of delirium tremens. He was warned by the doctor that unless he stopped drinking he would kill himself or do something violent. At such times I used to go to his mother's house and get her to come and stay with him until he recovered his senses. I was never afraid of him and never thought he would take my life, but latterly when he threatened to do this and also said that he would come and take my little boy from me and place him with some woman to keep, I thought it was best to get a divorce from him and secure the custody of the child."

"I would not have done this had he shown any determination to stop drinking, as he frequently promised me he would. But he only grew worse from day to day, and once or twice when he came near to see me he was so drunk my sisters would not let him in. There are not to blame one particle for the way he has acted, or the manner in which I am told he has spoken of them in his last letters. They always urged me to bear with him as long as there was any hope of his reforming. I presume he was half-crazed from drink when he fired these yesterday, and even then I did not think he meant to injure us until I saw him shoot at our little boy. Then I started to get out, and he shot me. It is a miracle we both escaped.

Miss Mary McGuigan, the sister, who was shot through the hand, says she did not grab the pistol, as was generally reported, but was some distance from him when he fired. How the little boy escaped was miraculous. The bullet passed through the back of Miss McGuigan's hand, thence through a knit-work shawl and through two folds of the baby's dress, near his left side. The little fellow is pale and wan, having just recovered from an attack of cholera-morbus, and it would have taken but a slight wound to have killed him.

The statements of the two sisters simply show that they were devoted to their married sister, Mrs. Lewis, and when the time came for her to leave, they were with her home with her and her little boy, when the faithless husband had failed to provide one himself.

"The Exposition Echoes" will be issued daily during the Exposition from the Post-Dispatch press-room in the Exposition building. It will contain the only official programme of the Gilmore concerts, will be replete with the "gossip of the aisles," an outline of the news of the day, and other attractive features. Some space has been reserved for advertisers, and any one desiring to have their card therein will be waited on by our representative by telephoning to No. 404.

IN ANNUAL SESSION.

Meeting of the Railway Mail Benevolent Association. WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 7.—The first session of the eighteenth annual convention of the Railway Mail Benevolent Association was held here yesterday. About two hundred delegates and alternates were present, including Postmaster-General Wainmaker, Second Assistant Postmaster-General Bell and General Superintendent White. Mr. Wainmaker thanked the convention for their cordial reception and said that a very large part of the credit of the success of the postal service belonged to the heroes of the railway mail.

At an afternoon session President Robinson made his annual address. He referred to the excellent condition of the organization, both as to membership and finances. Bearing on the question of representation at the convention, he stated that the railway mail transportation for the members placed a heavy strain upon the division superintendent, which had been cheerfully met, and through their efforts the railways had extended liberally through these courtesies.

He questioned, however, whether it would not be better to take some action to prevent further increase of representation at the convention, and he suggested that the railway mail transportation for the members placed a heavy strain upon the division superintendent, which had been cheerfully met, and through their efforts the railways had extended liberally through these courtesies.

Corn in Good Condition—Small Grain Harvested.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 7.—The weather crop bulletin for the past week says: "The temperature has been below the normal throughout. The percentage of sunshine has been much above the seasonal average. The rainfall for the week, except in the central and southern counties, has been below the seasonal amount and very unevenly distributed. Notwithstanding the cool nights which prevailed during the past week the early corn is reported as maturing rapidly and it is thought will be safe from frost in about ten days. Corn is reported generally in good condition, but in some of the warmer weather, and will not be safe from frost before Oct. 1. The threshing of oats and wheat, except in some of the northern counties, is practically completed. The yield of grain is generally well anticipated. Flooding is progressing slowly, owing to the dry and hard condition of the ground, but in the counties where rain fell the soil is in fairly good condition, and it is probable that a large area will be plowed the coming week for fall planting. Rain is badly needed for pastures, which are reported generally in poor condition. In some counties stock water is very scarce. Grapes and melons will be an average crop, while the yield of apples and peaches will be fair."

COLUMBUS' STATUE.

The Gift of New York Italians to the New World's Metropolis.

New York, Sept. 7.—The unloading of the Columbus statue was begun to-day. It came from Italy on the transport Garigliano.

Although the Italian Government had requested the authorities here to defer all ceremonies until the arrival of the royal man-of-war Ausonia, with the representatives of the Italian Government on board, a committee of Italian-born citizens of New York gave both sculptor Kasso and the officers of the Garigliano a cordial reception yesterday afternoon and will continue to entertain them until the arrival of the Ausonia about the middle of this month, when the municipal and Federal authorities will formally bid the distinguished visitors welcome.

Russo's statue of Christopher Columbus was made after the most authentic portraits of America's discoverer, and the face, which is more true to life than the common artistic conceptions of Columbus, which give him bearded features and a fierce expression, giving the whole monument to the cap on the head of Columbus a height of 35 feet. The monument was brought over in 170 parts and weighs 35 tons.

The work of excavation at Fort-ninth street and Eleventh avenue for the erection of the monument is completed and has been, in part, the labor of love, and has been given by Italian laborers in their hours of leisure.

The most remarkable person brought over by the Garigliano is Mario Garigliano, young son of the great Italian liberator.

John J. Outley's Death.

John J. Outley, who died on Monday, was a well-known citizen, chiefly remembered as the proprietor of a popular photograph gallery. He was an artist in that branch and was the first to introduce improvements in the Daguerrean and photograph business which he followed in St. Louis for many years. Mr. Outley was born in Dublin, Ireland, on the 26th of June, 1821. He was educated in the public schools of that city. He was a man of the strictest integrity, of a benevolent disposition, generous to a fault, and with some peculiar views, he questioned, however, whether it would not be better to take some action to prevent further increase of representation at the convention, and he suggested that the railway mail transportation for the members placed a heavy strain upon the division superintendent, which had been cheerfully met, and through their efforts the railways had extended liberally through these courtesies.
